AESIDECAR-2 returned to Mexico City and contacted the [] as prescribed in reference (A). A meeting was held with him on 27 October 1967. 2. AESIDECAR-2 reported that he had seen Identity-3 of reference (A) on the afternoon of 21 October and had given him 12 pairs of stockings and two ties to take back to []. The stockings were for [] wife and daughter, and the ties for []. Nothing of significance was discussed, but since AESIDECAR-2 had not had time to get the piece of tartan track which Identity-3 wanted to take back with him, it was agreed that they would meet again on 26 October. On 26 October AESIDECAR-2 called Identity-3 in his hotel room, but someone else answered and simply said that Identity-3 was "not there". 3. As far as Identity-4 of reference was concerned, AESIDECAR-2 had taken Identity-4 and another member of the FJSTEAL team to a local bank on 21 October, where the two athletes changed 400 FJSTEAL currency to Mexican pesos. They were given a rate of 2.50 pesos to one, or about twenty cents for one unit of FJSTEAL currency. AESIDECAR-2 then bought sweaters for the two athletes. 4. In line with reference (B), we told AESIDECAR-2 that we had decided not to continue the relationship with We strongly suspected provocation, but even if this was not the case, we could not justify his continuing to risk his life. We told AESIDECAR-2 to drop further attempts to contact Identity-3, and to have nothing further to do with Identity-3 or Identity-4, even if these persons should write to him, as they said they would. As for AESIDECAR-2 should regard his relationship with him as a completely private one -- he should answer any letters in any way he felt he should as a friend. He should not reply or react to any inferences to intelligence activity.

5. Short of having AESIDECAR-2 write to (or sending the message via Identity-3) that "the Amis are through with you" we did not believe it possible to terminate the operation through AESIDECAR-2, as suggested in reference (B). Nor did we think it fair or realistic to expect AESIDECAR-2 to terminate should the latter turn up in Mexico City in 1968. If comes to Mexico City (which we really doubt will happen) he will have to be met by someone who is better prepared than AESIDECAR-2 will be to handle a man who will claim, at least, that commitments have been made to him, etc., etc. For this reason we have told AESIDECAR-2 that while we have no further interest in services, we would like AESIDECAR-2 to let us know if he hears that is coming. At that point we would decide how best to handle the termination.

6. AESIDECAR-2 was again thanked for having contacted us and was told that his services, past and present, were greatly appreciated. He accepted our decision with the remark that we knew best. While he expressed relief at not having to become further involved, we suspect that he was slightly disappointed at having to retire from the game of international intrigue.
